

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 22.

ONE of the most singular develop ments of the science and practice of government in the last decade has been the spread of the automobile habit among public officials in the large cities. Somehow the field of official consciousness has been enlarged and men who twenty years ago, or even ten years ago, would gladly have used the street cars in traveling to and from their offices and making necessary visits outside now feel it beneath their dignity to employ any other means of transportation than a high power touring machine. It may be that a little time is saved by the use of an automobile. But the cost of transportation is multiplied and the temptations to the misuse of public vehicles for private purposes are so overwhelming that the town or city furnishing automobiles on a large scale to its officials necessarily devotes a great part of the service they render to private use. In this connec tion the New York Tribune says: "The idea that the holder of a public office walk short distances like an ordinary citizen is going out of date not only in the great cities but in the smaller touch with good old Mother Earth." A upon it as a devourer of tax collections. If the habit grows the village constable public expense will become a perquihumble commonalty.

ROYALTY ATTACKED.

Labor Leader ExcoriatesRoyal Family-

Opposition to Increased Civil List. London, July 22.-A severe attack upon the royal family was made in the House of Commons this evening by George Barnes, the labor leader, who was speaking in opposition to the passage of the civil list-the money paid the king and members of the royal family by the nation.

Barnes declared he would oppose t the end the granting of the increased civil list unless the king and the Prince of Wales would agree to surrender into the public treasury the revenue now received by them from the Duchies of the party. Lancaster and Cornwall, where they own immense landed properties which bring in large revenues. "The royal income is excessive and the expenses of the royal household are honeycombed with abuses," he said, "inasmuch as it conceals a nest of parasites who are fattening upon the nation under the shadow of the throne."

The civil list asked by the king and the members of the royal family this year amounts to $3,106,600. revenue from the Duchy of Cornwall amounted in 1908 to $414,250, while $308,700 was received from the Duchy of Lancaster that year. Since 1908, however, there has been a material increase in the revenues from these two plight. Ex-Premier Balfour, leader of the conservatives, replying said that the root of Barnes's objections seemed to be hat the royal family was over-expensive for the nation.

An unidentified laborite, without rising from his chair, cried out: "not over-expensive, over immoral.' The audacity of the remark seemed to daze Balfour for an instant, and he could only reply that he did not know

CONFEDERATE HEROINE.

There was laid to rest in the ceme tery at Groveton, Prince William county, Monday, the body of Mrs. Lucinda Dogan, one of the oldest women in northern Virginia, she having attained her niney-third year. Mrs. Dogan's mind remained clear up to her death, and she often related interviews she had had with the president and leading generals of the Confeder- WHITE WAISTS. acy, including Beauregard, Jackson

It was near the Dogan home that the slaughter of the federal troops, at the historie "railroad cut," took place, and the yard was the scene of a vast hospital for both armies when the tide of battle had swept past.

Mrs. Dogan's ministrations of relief, to wounded and dying, were acknowledged by many grateful letters and tokens of appreciation from soldiers and their relations after the war. During the first battle of Manassas

Mrs. Dogan had a wagon loaded with tribute the food and water, to any soldier in distress, no matter what uniform BRISTOW CREAMERY BUTTER he wore. This Christian act won Mrs. Dogan, the proud title of "The Belle of the Battlefield," a distinction bestowed by soldiers in both armies. The second battle was fought near the home at Groveton, and the family was comnelled to move to the home of he father, William Lewis, a mile distant During this battle, too, she ministered to the suffering soldiers.

It was largely due to Mrs. Dogan's efforts that the Bull Run chapter o the United Daughters of the Confede racy was organized, and the Confede rate cemetery, at Groveton, established.
